"A Soldier's Footsteps"

April 2013

Commander's Corner: A Great big Thanks' to all who responded to our plea for dues. It has been excellent and I commend all of you that have come through; special kudos to those of you who have gone beyond the call of duty and tendered extra $ towards our wreath fund and general coffers. I owe all of you an apology for being remiss in getting the March Newsletter issue published on the website. I had the article on the site but, forgot to add the link to the "Newsletter" page. Chalk one up to senility. One thing I have also been remiss in doing is giving a special "Thanks" to Rich Heroux for his diligent work providing our newsletter. Having been working with the website, etc., I realize how much personal time it takes to get these things accomplished and Rich has done an exemplary job in getting the monthly issues put together and published. I hope all of you appreciate the time and effort it takes and will help ease some of the research he does by contributing articles for publication. Also, special thanks, is due to Don Hicks and his wife, Renee, for keeping up with the Secretary/Treasurer job (and it is a job). Don has been battling some problems and, with the help of Renee, has been able to manage everything in spite of his recent illnesses. The dedication of these folks makes me proud to be associated with them. Many of our members belong to the Americal Division Veterans Association (ADVA) which is a worthy organization and is the base association upon which this chapter was founded. I would like to urge any of you not belonging to the ADVA to join if possible. Annual dues are only $15 and a life membership is $125. Congratulations to our, Vice-commander, Rich Heroux, who has been appointed as the Assistant Adjutant of the ADVA. I'm sure he will make us all proud. As I promised, the revamped "Members Roster" is out now and is in alphabetical order which will make it easier to maintain. We want to welcome our newest member, Alton Coleman (HHC).

K Keep safe and may the bond of battle never be broken!
Chuck

DoD Restoring Tuition Assistance for All Services: Military.com is reporting that tuition assistance programs that aid hundreds of thousands of service-members in gaining college educations will be restored quickly with renewed funding from Congress, Defense Department officials said last week.

Two Korean War MIAs Identified: The Defense POW/Missing Personnel Office recently announced the identification of remains belong to three soldiers who have been unaccounted-for since the Korean War. Identified are:

- Pfc. Bobby L. Byars, 18, of Griffin, Ga. In late November 1950, Byars and elements of the 31st Regimental Combat Team were deployed along the eastern banks of the Chosin Reservoir in North Korea. On Nov. 29, 1950, remnants of the 31st RCT, also known as Task Force Faith, began a fighting withdrawal to a more defensible position south of the reservoir. Byars would be reported missing on Dec. 12, 1950.
- Cpl. James R. Hare, 19, of Cumberland, Md. In February 1951, Hare and elements of the 2nd Infantry Division were supporting South Korea forces when Chinese forces launched a massive counter attack that got them to retreat south. Hare was reported as missing in action on Feb. 13, 1951. It was later learned he had been captured but died of malnutrition in April 1951.

Veterans Fight Changes to Disability Payments: Veterans groups rallied to fight any proposal to change disability payments as the federal government attempts to address its long-term debt problem. They say they've sacrificed already. Government benefits are adjusted according to inflation, and President Barack Obama has endorsed using a slightly different measure of inflation to calculate Social Security benefits. Benefits would still grow but at a slower rate. Advocates for the nation's 22 million veterans fear that the alternative inflation measure would also apply to disability payments to nearly 4 million veterans as well as pension payments for an additional 500,000 low-income veterans and surviving families. Economists generally agree that projected long-term debt increases stemming largely from the growth in federal health care programs pose a threat to the country's economic competitiveness. Addressing the threat means difficult decisions for lawmakers and pain for many constituents in the decades ahead. But the veterans' groups point out that their members bore the burden of a decade of war in Iraq and Afghanistan. In the past month, they've held news conferences on Capitol Hill and raised the issue in meetings with lawmakers and their staffs. They'll be closely watching the unveiling of the president's budget next month to see whether he continues to recommend the change. Supporters argue that chained CPI is a truer indication of inflation because it measures changes in consumer behavior. It also tends to be less than the conventional CPI, which would impact how cost-of-living raises are computed. Under the current inflation update, monthly disability and pension payments increased 1.7 percent this year. Under chained CPI, those payments would have increased 1.4 percent.

There are two theories to arguing with a woman.Neither works.

Columnist Seeks Resignation of VA Secretary:

The VFW called out TIME magazine columnist Joe Klein today for an article being published Monday that calls for the resignation of Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki. The article, entitled "Ten Years After: A National Disgrace," twists facts, attacks the secretary personally, and makes numerous allegations that his department is not taking care of veterans. "We want the VA to succeed, and that's why we work closely with Secretary Shinseki and his staff to help identify and correct problems in a professional manner from within, not by enlisting the media to sensationalize issues the great majority of Americans and, quite frankly, many veterans don't understand," said VFW National Commander John Hamilton. "The VFW helped to create the VA in 1930. We will not let it fail."

Music Goes On for Longest Serving Female Soldier:

What makes a good military career? Many career Soldiers might tell you they would be satisfied just doing 20 years and then retiring. Less than one percent of Americans serve in the military. Only a small percentage of those serve 20 years. When a Soldier comes along and serves for over 40 years and is still going strong, it's really something unique. Chief Warrant Officer 5 Jeanne Y. Pace, commander and band leader for the 1st Cavalry Division Band joined the Army in 1972, although back then it was called the Women's Army Corps. Little did she know then that 41 years later, she would still be wearing Army green. Pace is the longest serving female in the Army and the last active duty Soldier who was a part of the WAC. After all those years it might be difficult for some to imagine what keeps her going. "I believe I still have something to offer and I still enjoy my job," said Pace. Like many serving today, Pace said she joined the Army to establish her independence as an adult with the guarantee of clothing, food, shelter, and medical benefits while earning her education benefits and trying to figure out what she really wanted to do with her life. "I had no idea that a three-year enlistment turn into more than 40 years. There is just way I could imagine continued Pace began her career as a private with the 14th Army (WAC) Band at Fort McClellan, Ga., and after 13 years decided to apply to be a warrant officer. It was during this time she was dealt what she perceives was her only real setback during her distinguished career. "I failed the first time I tried to become a warrant officer," said Pace. Not one to let failure keep her down, Pace acknowledged the challenge, re-assessed her goals, and re-applied. Resilience paid off and she pinned on the rank of Chief Warrant Officer 2 in 1985. 13 years has quickly turned into 41 years and Pace acknowledged she has seen a lot of changes. Women in the Army have had their roles increased dramatically over that time period and things such as women's increasing role in combat arms have given the Army the opportunity to lead the way in adapting to those changes.

Funeral Director Information Resource

Funeral Honors Emergencies: You might have been there. The post phone rings and a grieving family asks you about funeral honors. Their dad, mom, sister or brother served, but they never joined the VFW or other veterans' group. They need help and they need it yesterday. Maybe they need a flag. Maybe they don't know how to get a "DD 214" and can't locate one (let alone know what it is) and a funeral home tells them they need it for a flag. "Can you provide them a flag?" they ask. They don't know what to do or to whom they should speak. How do you handle these emergencies? Your response can ease their suffering and anxiety or make you, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, look weak in a time of need. The Department of Veterans Affairs has an on-line resource. It is called Funeral Director Resources. This resource guide contains links to many VA sites with full information as to requirements and links to required forms. The resource guide also contains a lot of information on burials and flags, as well as information on a veteran's entitlement. Did you know that, in an emergency and absent a DD Form 214, the government will issue a burial flag. Here is the rule:

"If the claimant is unable to provide documentary proof, a flag may be issued when a statement is made by a person of established character and reputation that he/she personally knows the deceased to have been a veteran who meets the eligibility criteria." Source: VA Form 27-2008, Application for United States Flag for Burial Purposes. This application also contains rules for use of the flag to assist in the proper rendering of funeral honors to a deceased veteran. Veterans should work with local funeral homes and post offices. Share this information with them. They may not be aware of the Funeral Director Resources website's existence or the rule authorizing a statement in lieu of a veteran's DD Form 214.

US Army's Last Tanks Depart From Germany:

The U.S. Army's 69-year history of basing main battle tanks on German soil quietly ended last month when 22 Abrams tanks, a main feature of armored combat units throughout the Cold War, embarked for the U.S. The departure of the last M-1 Abrams tanks coincides with the inactivation of two of the Army's Germany-based heavy brigades. Last year, the 170th Infantry out of Baumholder disbanded. And the 172nd Separate Infantry Brigade at Grafenwöhr is in the process of doing the same. On March 18, the remaining tanks were loaded up at the 21st Theater Sustainment Command's railhead in Kaiserslautern where they then made the journey to the shipping port in Bremerhaven, Germany. There they boarded a ship bound for South Carolina. The tanks belonged to the 172nd along with a mix that were leftover from other units, according to the 21st TSC. "It is an honor to be one of the soldiers escorting the last battle tanks out of Germany," said Sgt. Jeremy Jordan of the 529th Military Police Company, in an Army story about the journey. "As these tanks sail back to the U.S., we are closing a chapter in history." From World War II on through the Cold War, tanker units were a heavy presence in Germany. At its peak, Germany was home to 20 NATO armored divisions, or about 6,000 tanks, according to the 21st TSC.

DoD Restoring Tuition Assistance for All Services: Military.com is reporting that tuition assistance programs that aid hundreds of thousands of servicemembers in gaining college educations will be restored quickly with renewed funding from Congress. Defense Department officials said last week. George Little, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said DoD intends to implement the programs in the way they were before the suspension of new enrollments was ordered earlier this month to meet the cost-cutting demands of the legislative process known as sequester. An amendment attached to the continuing resolution passed by Congress last week and signed by President Obama Tuesday specifically directed DOD to restore the tuition programs and "We will comply with the law," Little said.

VA Panel Debates Post 9/11 GI Bill Claims: House VA Subcommittee on Economic Opportunity held a hearing recently to review the implementation of VA's computer system used to process Post-9/11 GI Bill claims. Prior to the passage of the Post 9/11 GI Bill, Congress authorized $100 million to develop a new system, called the Long Term Solution or LTS, to fully automate education claims. Witnesses discussed the IT system and the problems that student-veterans face as they try to get real-time information on the status of their benefits. Since the Post-9/11 GI Bill became law, the subcommittee has held about seven hearings on the program. Subcommittee Chairman Bill Flores (R-TX) said "Congress expects the system and the information provided to veterans and schools to be more accessible so that everyone involved can make better-informed decisions on education and training benefits in the future." Student Veterans of America testified on potential improvements to the system and echoed the concerns of the VFW, which works closely with SVA on education issues.

Military Senate VA Committee Still Talking About VA Disability Claims Backlog: The Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee opened up their first full hearing of the session discussing the VA disability claims backlog. Current numbers recorded by VBA show total claims pending (including compensation, pension, education, appeals, etc.) at about 1,957,000. Most of the members expressed frustration that they are still talking about the claims backlog and the fact that the numbers are ever increasing. Telling witnesses from VA that this is the number one item they get calls about from constituents and that the VSO community has acknowledged it as a top priority. VA Undersecretary for Benefits Allison Hickey spoke strongly about VBA's transformation and the number of claims adjudicated, which surpassed 1 million last year. She also talked about the inventory of claims and the factors impacting the backlog. The committee members asked her about the goal to have the backlog under control by 2015 and the VA-DOD joint-integrated medical record as well as the ongoing plan for a seamless handoff from VA to DOD that seems to have dissipated. Joe Violante, Legislative Director for the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) reminded the committee that to build a paperless system with new technology and updated business processes as well as changing the cultural shift within VA will take time and collaboration with all interested parties.

Independent Budget Partners Lays Out VA Budget Needs: The VFW, along with its three Independent Budget (IB) partners—PVA, DAV, and AMVETS—has released what is believed to be the necessary funding for VA to continue to offer consistent high-quality healthcare and services to all eligible veterans, their families, and survivors. The comprehensive budget highlights the needs of older veterans and those young men and women returning from active duty to join civilian life. Funding information is provided after careful review of medical and administrative costs within VA, which form the foundation of the recommendations. The Administration and Congress are expected to release their FY 2014 budget proposals sometime in March. We will continue to update you here as the budget and appropriations cycle moves along in the 113th Congress. We will continue to ask Congress and the Administration to provide sufficient funding to meet the healthcare and benefit needs of veterans in a timely and predictable manner. IB Recommendations for FY 2014 include:

- $58.8 billion total for healthcare—$1.3 billion more than what the Administration recommended ($57.5 billion) in their advance appropriation last year.
- $2.4 billion for the Veterans Benefits Administration—approximately $226 million more than the expected FY 2013 appropriated level.
- $2.25 billion for all construction programs—approximately $900 million more than the expected FY 2013 appropriated level, and well below the true funding needs of construction projects.
- $611 million for medical and prosthetic research, approximately $28 million more than the expected FY 2013 appropriated level.

Defense Budget Harms Retirees: The Pentagon released its FY 2014 budget with proposals designed to cut military pay and increase health care fees for retirees and their families immediately came under fire. VFW Commander-in-Chief John E. Hamilton, a Vietnam veteran, said "We recognize the Pentagon has tough decisions but proposals in this year's budget breaks faith with our volunteer force by further burdening our military retirees and our military families." The proposed budget asks for a military pay raise of only one percent and increases TRICARE fees for military retirees and their families -- something the VFW adamantly opposed last session and included in resolutions passed by members at the 113th National Convention. VFW will continue to pressure Congress and the Pentagon to find savings in programs that do not affect military personnel, retirees and their families.

House VA Committee Discusses National Cemeteries: Earlier this week, The House VA Subcommittee on Disability and Memorial Affairs held an oversight hearing on the VA National Cemetery Administration or NCA. A recent audit that NCA performed on its gravesites found errors in burial placement and markers. According to Undersecretary for Memorial Affairs (NCA) Steve L. Muro, proper changes were made and continued oversight will be performed to determine best practices. Subcommittee members also asked if VA is determining ways to improve access to national cemeteries for all veterans, especially those that live in states that do not have one. Currently, 11 states with a combined veteran population of 1.8 million are without an active national cemetery.

Pentagon Struggles with High Cost of Health Care: The loud, insistent calls in Washington to rein in the rising costs of Social Security and Medicare ignore a major and expensive entitlement program - the military's health care system. Despite dire warnings from three defense secretaries about the uncontrollable cost, Congress has repeatedly rebuffed Pentagon efforts to establish higher out-of-pocket fees and enrollment costs for military family and retiree health care as an initial step in addressing a harsh fiscal reality. The cost of military health care has almost tripled since 2001, from $19 billion to $53 billion in 2012, and stands at 10 percent of the entire defense budget. Even more daunting, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that military health care costs could reach $65 billion by 2017 and $95 billion by 2030. On April 10, when President Barack Obama submits his fiscal 2014 budget, the Pentagon blueprint is expected to include several congressionally unpopular proposals - requests for two rounds of domestic base closings in 2015 and 2017, a pay raise of only 1 percent for military personnel and a revival of last year's plan to increase health care fees and implement new ones, according to several defense analysts. Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel insisted this past week that the military has no choice as it faces a $487 billion reduction in projected spending over the next decade and possibly tens of billions more as tea partiers and other fiscal conservatives embrace automatic spending cuts as the best means to reduce the government's trillion-dollar deficit.

The quickest way to double your money is to fold it and put it back into your pocket.

Sending Picture of 5 Veterans of 2/1: Five comrades from "B" Co. 2/1, (1970-71) linked up on March 16, 2013. Three are from around the Kansas City area drove up together to Mound City, MO and linked up with two from Omaha & Kearney NE. An LZ was established at a local truck stop and proceeded to have a mini-reunion. Robert "Bob" Pigg did the leg work in getting this event to happen. 4 hours was not enough time to catch up on the last 42 years, but we sure had a great time. The restaurant manager did not even get upset with us taking over a corner of his establishment for that length of time and invited us back anytime we wanted to get together again. Pictured below from left to right are: Don Campbell, Wellington, MO; Tim Bruner, Kearney, NE; Rod Beck, Shawnee, KS; Bob Pigg, Richmond, MO; and Larry Donahue, Omaha, NE.

House Armed Services Discusses Mental Health Research: On Wednesday the House Armed Services Personnel Subcommittee heard testimony on how research by DOD has improved the treatment our troops receive for mental health issues, particularly TBI and PTSD. Chairman Joe Wilson, (R-SC) noted that, since 2007, Congress has appropriated close to $1.5 billion for PTSD and TBI research, funding nearly 1,000 clinical and scientific studies. The panel, which included the Assistant Defense Secretary for Health Affairs, the Service Chief of the Behavioral Health Clinic at Walter Reed, and the Surgeons' General of each of the armed services, reported on how those funds have been used to create better practices for the diagnosis, access to care, and treatment of invisible wounds. Some items discussed included the use of embedded mental health teams in military units and the development of the PTSD checklist which allows clinicians to track symptoms of active duty service members over time. Of note, it was reported that the benzodiazepine class of medications typically used for anxiety may actually worsen many PTSD symptoms, while certain medications normally used to treat high blood pressure may reduce nightmares and hyper-vigilance.

MREs Are Back (Though They Never Really Went Away)

The deadline for ISAF personnel to depart Afghanistan is allegedly 31 DEC 14. As the drawdown gathers steam, a lot of amenities currently available to deployed troops will disappear (including a few that probably never needed to be there in the first place). Ethnic food, food specialty nights, some hot chow meals entirely – it’s all slowly going away. You have no doubt seen the outraged posts and comments on social media from people whose idea of supporting the troops is sharing a picture or someone else’s outraged post, comment or picture about our troops having to miss meals – an inaccuracy, in large part, because the meals in question aren’t being denied, they are being replaced with MREs or UGRs. Apparently not everyone understands the concept of “tooth to tail”. “Ye Gods. They gave a war and garrison came.” Nate M. “You’re not going to believe this s&!t Dave. Less than forty minutes from where we were eating MREs and showering once a week they had surf and turf night every Friday. Steak and lobster. Once a week. We were glad to get boxes of frozen corndogs. It’s like two different worlds.” In any case, MREs will be coming back in a larger numbers than deployed troops have seen in recent years. Part of this is due to an infrastructure that allows hot chow to be served with far greater frequency than any previous war in history. Part of it is because MREs are actually more expensive than a number of other options, including among other things boxed nasties. This is euphemistically referred to as returning to “expeditionary standards” and unfortunately it’s a necessary part of the draw-down. It will begin in the more outlying locations (those that had any amenities in the first place) and will slowly affect larger and larger installations. Presumably they’ll eventually pull out the ice cream stands and burger huts too. The original article refers to as MREs as “dreaded”. I wasn’t sure that was a completely accurate term..then I remembered the old egg and cheese omelet packages (not the more recent #4s, the older ones) and thought...maybe dreaded isn’t such a bad word after all.
